

REVISED

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

RS27619 / SCR128

Personal finance is an important educational subject, providing information which will impact daily living and decision making for the rest of a student's life. Our Idaho schools currently offer a patchwork of opportunities for personal finance instruction, with no statewide consistency in frequency, duration, content, or instructional methods. This resolution supports the creation of credit-bearing financial literacy classes at the high school, college, and university levels.

FISCAL NOTE

There is no requirement to expend funds. Some financial institutions offer a variety of software programs and other curricular materials through grants to Idaho schools. Costs of instruction will vary for each level of education, choice of program, and schedule. Costs also will vary and are voluntary.
